Full host or broken host?

At the recent meeting of Communion Ministers last weekend, the issue that was most talked about was that of running low of communion, which sometimes means that the priest or minister has to break hosts as they are distributing the Eucharist. Apparently some people are not happy to receive a broken host, or a half a host, which begs the question, what is half a host? Is it the body of Christ? What about a quarter? Is a small piece of communion the same as a big piece? We need more education about this. Most people probably know that in the early church the gathering of the community, that we call mass, was known as the "Breaking of Bread." There was no such thing as a full host or a half host or any host indeed for hundreds of years. The small round hosts are a relatively modern idea, and they do a great disservice to the understanding that we are the Body of Christ, that we share the body of Christ, the broken body, and that this sharing in the broken body unites us as one body, His body.

There are two handouts on this subject available at the entrance to the church, please take a read.
